

Letizia Carrera is professor of Sociology and Sociology of Territory at the Department of Research and Humanistic Innovation at the University of Bari Aldo Moro.

She is the scientific director of the Urban Studies Laboratory URBALAB Uniba, member of the executive board of the SUM City School Consortium and of the Dioguardi Foundation.

She has coordinated numerous national and international research projects on topics such as labor market (especially from a gender perspective), territorial systems with a focus on urban spaces, participatory processes, urban policies for inclusive cities, and policies aimed at ensuring conditions for active aging.

She is the author of numerous national and international publications on her research topics.